ACKNOWLEDGMENT

To the founder of Janus Unbound, Mohamed Salah Eddine Madiou, the most heart-felt appreciation and gratitude, from myself, and from each part of this collective association. Gratitude for quite a few intense things. Vision. Belief, commitment, and conviction. Global, diverse, and quality selection and connection. Spirited resistance. Stimulating unbound, free thought.

Thank you.

Janus, already somehow multiple, joined us. Or we grew more heads, or something. Somehow, in virtual space, in the spring of 2021 Mohamed offered me an amazing gift, too good to be true: the chance to work with him in the lead role on the journal, as Editor-in-Chief and Editor, arm in arm. A superb international, political scholarly association. An opportunity for excellent political activism, collaborative research, and collective global friendship. All that has been built and will be built in this effort begins in such a gift of trust and hope.

Thank you also for the friends and collaborators you assembled, notably Tahrir Hamdi and Ilan Pappé, two of our three associate editors. The third, Danine Farquharson, has become a close ally. The opportunity to reawaken friendships and establish new ones through exciting collective intellectual work has already been a tremendous experience, one which I hope continues for a very long time. We have become a diverse, formidable group. As we've grown, the founding intention and spirit of the project have only become clearer, stronger, truer: excellent, unconstrained, critical, and creative transdisciplinary intellectual work, to the point of the extreme, the radical, and the revolutionary.

To be part of Janus Unbound is to be exhilarated by the future, to be open to the promise and surprise of difference, and to be steeled to the challenges of resisting fatigue, complacency, and the failure of imagination. Mohamed Salah Eddine Madiou: thank you for planting a seed of bright intellectual promise and hope. I and many others look forward to making that promise become stronger, in ways that will delight and surprise us all.

Your friend and editing shadow,

Dr Peter Trnka, Editor-in-Chief,
Associate Professor of Philosophy, Memorial University of Newfoundland
