

Rachel Fraser

Three Haikus

ice stretches over
like membranous crystal skin
the sleeping city

precipitation
etched into cold window panes the warped external

silence steps unsure
halted by the choral song of rain swelled rivers